“As our 22-week appointment was over, we were able to see 3D pictures of Gibson’s face. Every single time the nurse would zoom into his face though, he would either cover his face or turn away. The nurse would get so mad about it, but she just didn’t understand. Spanish teacher Angela Wagoner had had a similar experience with her own son. Mrs. Wagoner’s husband, high school grade teacher Andrew Wagoner, spark an idea that might help solar in the same way.

Their son received his name based off their first names. The Wagoners had both gone through some rough times with their other children.
