LINCOLN, NE — The Nebraska School Activities Association is honored to recognize Susan Doehling of Shelby-Rising City as this week's Above and Beyond Award nominee.

Known for her selfless dedication and genuine care for students, staff, and the school community, Susan is the kind of person who quietly makes a big impact every single day.

Susan is the first to step up when help is needed—especially when it comes to ticketing and event support. While she already fulfills her required duties, she regularly volunteers to cover for others or simply to show up and cheer on the students and teams she loves. Her presence at events is a reflection of her deep pride in the district and her commitment to the students she serves.

In her roles as both a paraprofessional and bus driver, Susan is nothing short of exceptional. Her warm smile and kind greetings brighten the days of everyone she encounters, and students genuinely look forward to seeing her on the bus or in the hallways. In her 1:1 paraprofessional position, she goes above and beyond to support, encourage, and uplift the students in her care—treating each one with love, respect, and attention.

Though Susan would never seek the spotlight, her humility only adds to the reasons she is so deserving of this recognition. She embodies the heart of Shelby-Rising City, and her consistent acts of kindness and commitment truly represent what it means to go above and beyond.

The NSAA's Above and Beyond Program is designed to recognize the hidden gems of communities across Nebraska. Click here to nominate someone today!
