Lunch Account Policy

School for many kids can be the place they feel most safe. Policies put in place support this feeling among students. At Los Santos High School, putting in the hands of students who have negative balances is not the right solution to get lunch account balances paid. By looking at how this could poorly affect the people around us have responded, and other solutions that could be more see that this is not the right policy to put into the school system.

For many families, paying things such as school lunches can be a struggle. Now, if this was you, I'm sure you wouldn't want everyone to know what you struggle with. Having this stamp on the kids' hands can have detrimental effects. They can feel embarrassed that they don't have their lunch payed like some of the other kids. It can also make it a lot easier to be picked on. As a school system, your number one goal should be promoting a nice, bully-free zone to learn. Putting these kids on the spot out in front of everyone with money issues contradicts this goal. The kids may also start to feel that they need to worry about money issues. This is not something kids need to be worrying about, especially at school.
